The screenshot shows a GitHub pull request for 'feature/feature' branch into 'main'. The pull request has 2 commits and was created 10 minutes ago. A comment from '@Ankita-Advitot' asks for review of the PR for feature branch. Another comment from 'Ankita-Advitot' says 'Everything is fine except in built functions'. The pull request summary indicates 'No conflicts with base branch' and 'Merging can be performed automatically'. The merge button is visible at the bottom.

4 Author must:

- Reply to the comment
- Update code if needed
- Resolve the conversation

The screenshot shows a GitHub pull request interface. At the top, there are two comments:

- Ankita-Advitot commented 2 minutes ago: "Everything is fine except in built functions" (with a smiley face emoji).
- sanjanamutkiri11 commented now: "Everything is fine except in built functions", "Okay", and "I will Use my own logic" (with a smiley face emoji).

On the right side, there are several sections:

- Milestone: No milestone.
- Development: Successfully merging this pull request requires these issues. None yet.
- Notifications: Unsubscribe (You're receiving notifications because the thread.)
- 2 participants: Icons for Ankita-Advitot and sanjanamutkiri11.
- Lock conversation.

In the center, there is a green box indicating "No conflicts with base branch" and "Merging can be performed automatically." Below it is a "Merge pull request" button with a dropdown menu, and a note: "You can also merge this with the command line. View command line instructions.".

At the bottom, there is an "Add a comment" section with a "Write" tab, a preview area, and a text input field containing "Add your comment here...". It also includes a Markdown support notice ("Markdown is supported") and a file upload area ("Paste, drop, or click to add files").
